

Hillman rehired as transportation supervisor

BY JACQUI COCHRAN
Today's contract hearing for Hancock High School Principal Donald Hillman was canceled, following action taken Monday by the county school board to renew the administrator's contract.

The board went into executive session for the discussion of personnel, came out and unanimously approved three recommendations by Superintendent Terrell Randolph.

The first was to rescind the February vote denying Hillman's contract renewal. The second was to approve Hillman's contract renewal for the 1991-92 school year.

The third was to transfer Hillman, upon approval of contract renewal, "to the position of instructional management (a position Hillman now serves for the high school), transportation director (a position Assistant Superintendent Eddie Danzey now serves), and any other duties the superintendent may so designate."

Hillman, principal at the high school for the past 11 years, was denied contract renewal February 15 when the board voted to reject Randolph's recommendation to rehire.

Board members Lennette Necaise and Kay Sones originally voted not to renew, while Charles Ray Thomas voted to renew the contract. Board president Frank Miller abstained and Carol Bustetter was absent.

On March 11, a letter from 55 Hancock High School teachers supporting the contract renewal for Hillman was read to the members of the school board.

Hillman was notified Wednesday of his immediate transfer. He will remain in his present office until a suitable office can be furnished for his use.

Hillman reported that his contract with the district is for an administrative position. That position is not specified in the contract.

Following the Monday meeting, Randolph said, "I may not hire anyone," when asked who would replace Hillman as principal.

Randolph did say Hillman's salary would remain the same, an annual $41,000 as paid for the position of principal.

Prior to the beginning of Monday's meeting, Necaise and Bustetter each received a summons to appear at the hearing originally scheduled for today.

Randolph said the two attorneys hired by the board have been notified that the hearing has been terminated and that he expected no charges to be made to the district for retaining their services.

Attorney Jim Keith from Jackson had been hired to represent the board, and attorney Frank

Put to the test

Mike Willumitis, left, assistant chief of the Bay St. Louis Fire Department, passes out tests to volunteer firefighters participating in a certification training program class. The weekly classes, which are team-taught by Willumitis and Diamondhead fire chief Dennis Westbrook, give the volunteer firefighters the training they would receive at the Fire Academy in Jackson. Firefighters receive classroom instruction and field exercise training, then must go to Jackson to take the final exam. Westbrook said the firefighters attend the classes at the Hancock County Fire Academy Center on their own time. County Administrator Jay Marsh said Hancock County is among the first in the state to conduct such a program. (Echo staff photo by Traci Bonney)

Cafeteria blamed for sewerage problems

BY JACQUI COCHRAN
Hancock County Port and Harbor Commission was told Monday problems at the sewerage treatment plant servicing Hancock High School could cause the board to be in violation of their discharge permit.

Zoe Bretzius of B&B Services said, "There is 12 to 14 inches of grease floating in the tanks, along with little pieces of plastic that are getting into my clarifiers and showing up in the marsh."

She also reported to the commission a tank was leaking, which she believed had "popped a seam during transportation."

Bretzius conjectured the grease problem was a result of improper filtering from the school cafeteria. She said, "The pieces of plastic are getting into the waste water system."

Bretzius told the board that she had met that morning with Hancock County School Board Superintendent Terrell Randolph, Assistant Superintendent Eddie Danzey and representatives of Lincoln Builders of Ruston, La.

"I recommend the commission not accept possession of the plant at this time. Let the school fight with the manufacturer."

The plant is under a one-year warranty which expires in September.

The commission, which presently operates the plant is to assume ownership upon acceptance that it is in good working condition.

The commission instructed Bretzius to take photos and collect samples of the non-organic materials discharging from the lines.

Port and Harbor is the responsible party since they hold the discharge permit for the new plant and for the plant which services the airport. The new treatment plant is under warranty until September.

Following the commission meet Hancock County School District Assistant Superintendent Eddie Danzey was contacted and reported, "We are aware of the problem. The mechanical contractor has said it will be corrected."

"We were notified and took immediate action."

In other business, the commission unanimously approved the renewal of the yearly fixed based operator's lease with Gene Phillips of Phillips Aviation following a brief discussion of the improvements to the Stennis Air Park since his commission.

"To go from six planes to 70 planes since taking over the airport is a remarkable business turn-around," commented Commissioner Dave McDonald to Gene Phillips.

The commission credited Phillips for the inflow of 14 applicants to rent the 12 T-hangers recently completed.

Dispute continues over Blue Meadow property

BY TRACI BONNEY

Members of the Bay St. Louis-Waveland School Board discussed Monday night a controversy surrounding a nine-acre piece of property on Blue Meadow Road which is currently being sought by the City of Bay St. Louis for a city-county youth recreation center.

The property discussion started when board member Jim Wilcox requested that board attorney Lucien Gex take steps to secure the property from any attempts by the city to take it. Wilcox said he thought the city, if it obtains the property, will then sell it.

Gex told the board the district could not lay claim to the property through eminent domain unless the board could prove that it has a specific use for it and is willing to pay fair market value to the owners. In this case, Gex said, no deed has been found to prove who does own the land, so the money would be paid to the court and would be held in the event someone appears who can verify ownership.

If no owner appears, the money would go to the state, he added.

Gex continued by explaining that another avenue for obtaining the land, adverse possession, would be difficult to build a

Bay-Waveland school board considers girls' sports teams

BY TRACI BONNEY

The Bay St. Louis-Waveland School Board is considering giving its district's girls a sporting chance.

The board talked Monday night about the possibilities of starting girls' soccer and softball teams. Superintendent Robert Magee said the softball team is "on tap," and the board talked about, but did not decide on, the idea that the team participate in a fall softball season instead of a spring one.

Magee said there are only a few other girls' soccer teams on the Coast and suggested that further study be made before a team is proposed.

Girls currently are allowed to participate in soccer on co-ed teams.

In other business, the board: —approved the March meeting minutes and claims docket; —accepted a bid of $5,445 from Associated Food Equipment and Services from Meridian for a piece of cooking equipment;

—approved a Chapter I budget amendment request;

—accepted the resignation of food services employee Rose Marie Gustafson.

Supervisors to have input in gill net regs

BY JACQUI COCHRAN

Before the legislative session ended last week in Jackson, the controversial gill net amendment had reached a compromise.

Purse seines were forbidden within a mile from coastal shores, and county boards of supervisors were given 30 days to "submit proposed regulations to the Bureau of Marine Resources (BMR) to regulate within their respective counties the use of gill and trammel nets."

House bill No. 1106 continues to describe how BMR "may consider" proposals in formulating regulations.

State Representative J.P. Compretta reported last week the provision through which the supervisors may submit proposed regulations was a victory of sorts.

He explained members of the conference committee wanted

Sheriff's Department to nab tag offenders

Hancock County Sheriff's Department officers will be setting up roadblocks over the next few weeks to check for illegal out-of-state tags, according to Sheriff Ronald Peterson.

He said, "We've received numerous complaints from people who see people living here that don't have Mississippi tags on their vehicles. Most of the complaints come from Diamondhead, the area around Port Bienville Industrial Park, Bay Side Park and Shoreline Park."

State law requires that anyone moving into Mississippi obtain vehicle tags within 30 days. Peterson said anyone caught with an illegal tag will be cited and fined, which could lead to an additional $250 fine when the person does obtain his tag.

Peterson said the deputies will also check driver's licenses during this annual roadblock operation.

"QUOTABLE QUOTES"

By Ellis C. Cuevas

It was such a shame to hear that the Great Horned Owl which was caught in a steel trap had to be destroyed.

Habitat for creatures of the wild continues to shrink, and owls have been able to move to the edge of the woods. They should be protected as they are by federal law.

The number of owls in the area continues to decrease. One of the reasons is because of illegal capture and killing of the birds of prey.

Owls feed mostly on rodents, so they play an important role in nature by controlling our rat and mice populations.

Trappers should control their traps and remove them after trapping seasons are over.

I would like to see them with a steel trap of an equal size and proportion sprung around one of their legs.

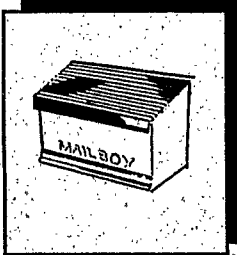

I bet they would think twice before they went about the area setting such traps.

The recent rains have been a blessing for our forestry folks as it help curb the numerous woods fires we have been plagued with in recent weeks.

Hancock County just has far too many woods fires. Homes are threatened, our forests are destroyed, wildlife takes a beating, and many times firefighters' lives are endangered in quelling these blazes.

It is illegal to set fires and let them get away from you, and persons doing so can be charged for damages.

It will not be long, and woods fires will once again be a problem. I urge all folks to be extremely careful with fires.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Religious followers fail to see obvious in gaming issue

To the Editor: The exchanges covered in the Sea Coast Echo between the gambling proponents and opponents have been very interesting. We are always struck by the obvious inconsistencies in the arguments and logic of gambling opponents, however, and wonder why the "sheep" who follow their shepherds into battle against gambling do not see them.

For instance, in the Sunday, Apr. 7 issue, we see on the front page that prayer is a weapon in their arsenal against gambling, and that they are going to rely upon Jesus Christ for assistance. That brings up a question in our minds.

Unless someone just forgot to pray before the election, we can only assume that these same religious people appealed to Jesus Christ before the election. Why didn't Jesus just end it the easy way if he is so interested in the gambling issue?

Assuming that "the shepherds" did pray before the election, then we can only conclude that their prayers were not heard. Yet the Bible says that Jesus gives his people whatever they ask. We can only conclude from all of this that these crusaders are not his people at all. Why don't the sheep who tag along behind them see this?

Another point baffles us. There is not one scriptural precedent for "shepherds" going into the courts to battle for or against anything. Can you imagine Jesus troubling himself with such mundane matters as who the next Caesar would be, or fighting the unjust tribute imposed upon him at Capernaum? Jesus didn't even get a lawyer to defend himself when they were taking about killing him.

The brother of Jesus, James, tells us what the religious should be doing. "Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this: to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep oneself unspotted from the world" (James 2:27).

It should be clear to all those taken in by today's religion that being troubled by the gambling issue is a "spot" of the world. It should be clear that all endeavor other than helping the helpless in their affliction and remaining free of world issues is impure and defiles religion, based upon the words of the Apostle James. Why don't the sheep see this?

It seems that the religious are not against gambling, only against legalizing gambling. The Catholics have been operating an illegal gambling operation for years. Yet no one ever went on a crusade against that. It is obvious that Rome wants to stay out of the fray. They have too many Bingo dollars to lose by speaking out. For their part, it is better to pray about something else, like the war in Iraq. Why don't the sheep see the hypocrisy in that?

Finally, this crusade is not against city slicker gamblers. It is against every person who voted to permit dockside gambling in Hancock County. Because the majority of voters chose to permit gambling, this crusade is against democracy. It is a threat to the American way of life.

The sheep who are funding this crusade with their hard-earned "discretionary money" are also funding the opposition in court with their tax dollars (and ours). Why don't they see that no matter what the outcome of the issue is, they will be on the losing side, and the only ones who will gain are the shepherds who are using them to fill pews, put a few feathers in their own hats, and to make names for themselves?

Dear Editor,

In the words of callers to the Rush Limbaugh radio program, "Dittos" to Waveland's Ward 4 Alderman Stan Weidman, the watchdog of expenditures of the City of Waveland.

Alderman Weidman refuses to be a rubber stamp member of the board. If something does not look right, he questions it. The pounding of the gavel by the mayor should not deter him from questioning anything that looks out of line.

I agree with Mr. Weidman that the priorities are, as they say, "the cart before the horse," and that sewerage and drainage problems should come before the refurbishing of City Hall.

The constituents of Alderman Weidman are behind him 100 percent. Keep up the good work!

Give competition a chance in Waveland cable TV issue

Dear Editor,

I was somewhat dismayed when I read the article in the Sunday edition with reference to the cable TV issue. While I have been a subscriber only since May, 1990, when I moved here, I can tell you that the service we receive for the price we pay is grossly out of line!

I have had nothing but continuous aggravation and interruption of signals along with monthly billing problems since I became a customer. This, to me, spells out—quite clearly—the need for improvement or change or fair competition or maybe even application of the democratic process. Some would refer to it as the "free enterprise" system.

I say, let the competition come in and give the people a choice. To do otherwise simply removes the right of the people to choose. When competition is thwarted, the system of free enterprise is stumped and water can't seek its own level.

To wait and delay the inevitable (whatever that means) for further investigation is not reasonable. Further, this plays into the hands of Multivision who claims market saturation. I don't believe it, but competition would surely prove it.

I challenge the Waveland Board of Aldermen (and women) and the mayor to act swiftly to approve the ordinance and get on with it. The time lost until the competition can begin its work probably proves nothing. Maybe a barrage of calls from the constituency would prove effective. Let's try it! The phone number is 467-4134.

Concerned,

Act now to urge ban on steel hunting traps

To the Editor:

If you read my column, Back to Nature, you will more fully understand my horror of the occurrences of Friday, April 5. The Great Horned Owl in my column is hopefully still flying. The one I write about now is not.

I received a call at my shop. My hands are tied there as I'm not in rehabilitation. Rehab is difficult, time consuming, all-consuming, tedious, thankless, sad, gut-wrenching, and occasionally exhilarating when you have had a successful recovery. But this call came, and I could not ignore it.

A Great Horned Owl had been caught in an illegal steel-jaw trap; the insidious steel trap that does not discriminate. It can latch down on anything that trips it—unsuspecting children, wandering pet dogs, your neighbor's cat, another friend walking in its path. Whatever. Who knows what its victim will be.

The intent of the trap just by the way it is constructed: to maim beyond repair the captive animal.

Unfortunately, in this situation, this trap was probably baited for this magnificent creature. Those who ignorantly view predators as a threat to something they want to protect will bait these horrid traps specifically for these protected species.

This bird, once trapped, lived through a hell that no creature should experience. It still had the strength to fly with the trap gripping its broken leg. An owl with an injured or broken leg is rendered useless, as it captures its prey with its talons.

So, this owl flew off with the trap attached, finally landing where it was found, the trap caught on a fence and the bird beating its wings against a fence.

If this upsets you, I apologize, but I am not sorry for writing this. It is a fact of steel traps. It is a fact of the mentality of the person who uses this cruel device. It is something that should enrage you and cause you to ask this county to join the cities of Bay St. Louis and Waveland to outlaw the use of such traps.

The Wildlife Rehabilitation and Nature Preservation Society in Pass Christian has dealt with steel traps before. Legislation is abounding in this state and all across the United States. Eventually these traps will be history, but not soon enough.

Most members of National Space Technology Laboratories who worked developing and testing the Columbia Space Shuttle engines in Hancock County will watch Friday's launch on their home television, according to Robert James, administrator of finance and administration for Rocketdyne at NSTL.

Residents in the Kiln area were startled by several loud explosions heard sporadically for two consecutive days recently. The blasts, set by the U.S. Army Armament Research and Development Command at the National Space Technology, were apparently amplified by atmospheric conditions.

Subject to funds available, county school trustees Tuesday evening, in their second session in as many days, approved administrative and coaching staff pay hikes on a two-figure basis. One is a $600 per year raise and the other $500. Calling for the straight across the board salary increase, Robert F. Ladner, county superintendent of education, noted classroom teachers received an increase last year, but the salaries of the system's administrative staff has remained unchanged.

Seventeen-year-old Wendell Ladner of Hancock North Central and most sought after high school basketball player in the county, signed an athletic scholarship with the University of Southern Mississippi. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Arron Ladner, and the signing took place at the annual sports banquet held in Pops Ferry Restaurant on Monday.

Miss Caro Weston, Hancock County nutrition supervisor in charge of school lunches, has returned from district convention of supervisors held in Hattiesburg a few days ago, and reports the convention one of constructive deliberation. The meeting was largely attended and a hundred per cent enthusiasm was manifested, it was stated. Without solicitation, Miss Weston stated, The Sea Coast Echo was cited in open meeting as the newspaper in the district that gave this project the most publicity, and that it not only served the public good, but that this service proved of value in further fostering the usefulness of the project.

"Spillway System, if adopted, will ruin oyster industry," G.L. Hopkins in interview tells of the fallacy of the proposed system to relieve Mississippi River flood at expense of fishing industry—should be opposed without quarter. Hopkins, capitalist and well-known retired businessman of New Orleans, who owns a summer home here on the Waveland beach, was a visitor to the Bay on Wednesday and was a guest of his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. P.V. Saucier. Mr. Hopkins is a student of public affairs and ever abreast with current topics. Just now he is justly apprehensive, and every resident of the Mississippi Gulf Coast should rise with him and voice register their opposition to the proposed spillway theory and its adoption regarding the control of the Mississippi River at New Orleans and vicinity during the flood period. The Mississippi River water from the spillways would fill the Mississippi Sound to Biloxi. For nine years the Bonne Crevasse flowed. It was not much of a crevasse, but it killed the oysters in Louisiana marsh and did up the fishing in the Mississippi Sound, Hopkins said.

"That's a good one. It (Bay St. Louis) is different from any other place."

and tug boat, the commission passed two resolutions.

One authorized commission attorney Robert Genin to write notices of intent to remove the vessels, and the other gave approval to advertise for the removal.

The commission expressed the necessity to take action since previous commitments by the owners to remove the navigational hazards have proven untrue.

Payment No. 2 of $5,241 for the "Airport Master Plan Update" was approved by the commission. The "update" is in connection with the regional airport concept.

Director Harold "Buz" Olsen informed the commission that the "Airport Master Plan" had been given an extension from the April 1 submission deadline in order to coordinate the update with a feasibility study presently being prepared.

The commission approved participation in a Technical Assistance Grant with the State of Mississippi which will be matched 50/50 between the state and the commission, costing the commission $2,600.

Olsen explained that the State of Mississippi expressed the desire to participate with Hancock County in seeking more information from the Louisiana side in determining the site for the proposed regional airport. The study would hopefully help to support the choice of the Stennis site.

Commission president Ronald Artigues said, "On the part of Hancock County, we need to do this."

The commission approved: —authority for engineer Carlos Cordon of Cortech, Inc. to proceed with specifications for the preparation of Weber Road in the Industrial Park. Weber Road is to be paved by Calgon Carbon Corporation of Pittsburgh, following the preparation of the road by the commission, as agreed in the purchasing contracts;

—authority for Olsen to advertise for the preparation work to Weber Road upon completion of specifications;

—the general operating docket, items 1-77;

—the railroad operating docket consisting of 24 items;

—the Industrial Park revenue docket, consisting of 11 items;

—and the general obligation bond of 1990 docket.

Hillman

Wittmann from Gulfport had been hired as hearing officer.

Hillman reported Wednesday, "I have no choice but to comply with the transfer."

In other business the board approved:

—the resignation of Paul Chighazola as bus driver for the district, effective April 1;

—the recommendation to employ Jean Schwartz as a bus driver for the remainder of the 1990-91 school year.

The board also approved a recommendation by Randolph to hire certified and non-certified personnel for the 1991-92 school year.

On Monday, April 1, the board appointed Danzey in Randolph's absence, to make recommendations for the hiring of certified and non-certified personnel for the new year.

During that meeting, board members expressed confusion over when the superintendent would return to make the recommendations.

Randolph stated in the presence of board members Monday, "They all knew I would be gone, especially Mr. Danzey."

No reply was made by the board.

case on, because the phrase "adverse possession" indicates that the district has done something to possess the land, such as pay the taxes, fence the property or mow it.

The school district does not pay taxes on its land, and the board wasn't even aware the property was in the district's name on the tax map until about a year ago, Gex said.

According to Bay St. Louis Mayor Edward Favre, the city still plans to use the entire nine acres for a recreation center, which is expected to include a soccer complex and a skate-board park. He said city attorney John Scaffide is completing research on a property deed, and the city's next step will be to file an eminent domain suit.

"No deed has been located yet to tie the property to the school district or anyone else," Favre stated.

Letters

If you had only seen this magnificent bird, obviously healthy 24 hours earlier... This time of year it was probably hunting to feed its young. Who knows? All I saw was senseless destruction of a magnificent federally protected bird. My owl. Yours.

There were five million reported accidental mutilations (non-targeted animals) in the U.S. last year. Now that's just the ones reported. That doesn't include the animals that get killed because the person who sets the steel trap does not want anyone else to find out. Horrid? You bet it is. And just think: we hold ourselves up as being intelligent and wonderful. And look how we do things.

Another extremely shocking fact: 63 foreign countries have already banned these types of traps. We in the U.S. think that we are so civilized that we can judge other countries on many moral issues, yet allow this to continue. I'm amazed at our dualities. What is taking us so long on this obvious issue?

Another distressing fact: most of the trapped critters are endangered species.

So, the Great Horned Owl, with his mutilated leg, damaged wings, had to be euthanized. A merciful end to the hell it endured.

I only hope that his life can serve to enrage us to act locally. We cannot change the world, but we can change Hancock County. We can make it a nicer, safer place for all.

This appeal is publicly made to ask our supervisors to please take the necessary action to make these steel traps illegal in Hancock County. Let's join 63 other civilized countries.

Each of us should call the Hancock County supervisors at 467-0172 to let them know just exactly how we feel.

ON PATROL

POSSESSION OF CONTROLLED SUBSTANCES WITH INTENT TO DISTRIBUTE AND DISPENSE

Lt. Steve Campbell, district commander of the Mississippi Narcotics Bureau's Gulfport office, reported Tuesday the arrest of a Diamondhead resident on drug-related charges.

Campbell said James Boyce, 55, owner and operator of Boyce Clinic, was arrested Monday and charged with two counts of obtaining controlled substances by fraud and one count of possession with intent to distribute and dispense controlled substances.

Most of the drugs found during a search of the clinic were diet pills, Campbell said, but some were Valium and other substances. He said the investigation started with information that Boyce was illegally ordering the pills and was running a clinic that was not registered with the Drug Enforcement Agency.

Boyce has been released from the Hancock County jail on $8,000 bond, Campbell said. He added that other arrests are expected.

The problem of authority and enforcement continuously blocked all efforts by the supervisors.

Merle Norman Cosmetics features a wide selection of makeup to make each bride "beautiful" on her special day. Lisa Ladner is the store manager.

Each invitation comes with two envelopes. How should these be addressed? On the smaller, inner envelope write "Mr. and Mrs. Brown" (exclude first names). If children under 18 years old are included, do not write "and family," but add their first names on the following line, as in "Jennifer and Barry." The outer envelope should be addressed fully for mailing.

What is a "pew card"? A "pew" or "within the ribbon" card is a small card printed with "Within the Ribbon" in the same lettering style as your invitations. It is sent along with the invitation to special or honored guests who should be seated toward the front of the church.

Must my invitations be engraved? For a very formal wedding, genuine copper plate engraving is still the finest of the printing arts, and certainly should be considered. However, advanced printing technology has nearly duplicated the look of fine engraving, at a considerably lower cost, with a process called thermography or raised lettering.

BACK TO NATURE

By Lydia Schultz

Special to the Echo
By LYDIA SCHULTZ
As the Red-bellied Woodpecker ratta-tat-tats his mating drum on the sides of trees, on the tops of bird houses, and anywhere else he can, I am once again reminded of just how lovely Spring can be.

The Cardinal bellows his most melodious song of all our birds, for this is the time of year that he can show that he can do more than look magnificent; he can sound it, too!

As I walk out in the early mornings to empty feeders surrounded by lingering American Goldfinches, one can feel the hustle and bustle of all the little critters. There are more noises than usual. So I fill them all as I did the day before.

A call from Bob Esher this week brought home the reality that anything can happen. Saturday afternoon, as his son Scott was riding his bike, he came upon an immature Great-horned Owl in the middle of a street. It was a quiet street, thank goodness. Scott raced home to get his father. They found the magnificent adult in the area which was a great sign. She was trying to care for the eager youngster.

I convinced Bob to make a make-shift nest on a limb above the ground. Later I found that he was right. He didn't need to do that. I was told that Great-horned Owls are more than capable of taking care of anything (including man) that they deem as harmful.

The young bird, which was larger than any immature bird I've ever seen, was so brave, it sat on the ground clicking its bill at us, convinced that that would scare us. It was a beautiful beige down covering the fat body. There were a few signs of full-fledged feathers on the wings and tail.

Bob carried the bird to the platform that he'd built while battling gnats like we've not seen in years. (Nothing but the promise of a sighting of a Great-horned Owl could've gotten me out in the midst of those miserable pests!)

And then I saw the adult! It's inspiring to see such a wing spread. It perched on the tip top of the largest pine perusing the area quickly. Then it flew off.

Later I was told that young owls often leave the nest early, like Mocking Birds do in your backyard. The adults will follow the young and take care of them as long as there are brush and cover nearby for hiding and protection.

This happened just a few days after Marilyn Mestayer told me about another spectacular occurrence across the street from my house. She witnessed the arrival of approximately 200-300 Yellow-crowned Night Herons.

Folks, this is not something that one can expect. This is one of those things that a birder lives for but cannot plan or even imagine. One Yellow-crowned Night Heron is nice; two is great, but 200 to 300 sitting in trees for several hours and then flying at sunset across a pink sky can bring inspirational thoughts to anyone.

I wish I'd been around. She tried to reach me, but I was hauling hummingbird plants. Que sera!

All of these things happened in my neighborhood. What's going on in yours?

Have you seen any of the Ruby-throated Hummingbirds that have been coming through the last few weeks?

Have you seen the Prothonotary Warblers at your bird

Sights and sounds of Spring delight local bird watchers baths? Or the Black-and-white Warblers gleaning the trees for insects? Or the Hooded Warbler looking so spectacular?

April and May can be exciting from your feeder to the tip top of your trees. I heard of the first Indigo Bunting at a feeder this week. I've been looking, and I'm sure every other avid feeder-watcher has, too. This is a favorite. But get your field guides ready, because you'll see lots of colors coming through now.

Tanagers, Summer and Scarlet; Yellow-billed Cuckoos, Blue and Rose-breasted Grosbeaks, and many Warblers, too numerous to mention.

The Red-headed Woodpecker should start coming back to the feeder mid-April. Don't ask me where they all go in the winter. This is their permanent range, but most "go someplace" mid-September and return April 15, give or take a few days.

When you garden this month, which most of us do, remember to garden for the birds. When you do your insect control, ask for environmentally safe products. Start your compost pile. Let's make plans for a safer place for you, your children, my children, and our wildlife.

Bay Middle students obtain victory with Marine Litter legislation

BY JACQUI COCHERAN
What began as a class exercise in the legislative process four months ago will now become a piece of law.

The combined sixth grade classes of Jane Lamb and Jeanette Handshoe at Bay Middle School had much to celebrate this week with news that the Mississippi Marine Litter Act of 1989 would be continued, and would contain all but one of the students' proposals for tightening of the law.

State Representative J.P. Compretta and Senator Vic Frankiewicz each called a class Wednesday with the good news on "the kid's bill," as Lamb said the legislators have proudly come to call it.

"The kids jumped up into the air and cheered when I told them," Lamb recalled.

The bill left conference committee late Tuesday with community service time added to the fines; a penalty by which those under 18 can also be held accountable for their actions; and a closed container provision which requires all hazardous liquids be kept secure from spillage.

The only part of the student's original proposal which was left out was a change in the fines.

The students had asked that the fines be raised and that minimum fines be written into the law.

The law presently names that "it is unlawful for any person or vessel to discharge any type of plastics, including synthetic ropes, fishing nets, garbage bags and other garbage, including paper products, glass, metal, dunnage, lining and packing materials into the marine waters of this state."

"For a first violation...punished by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00)...For a second or subsequent violation...punished by a fine not to exceed ten thousand dollars ($10,000), or revocation of boating licenses, or both."

In January when the Bay Middle students chose the Marine Litter Law as their project they expressed a desire to see a bottom placed on the fines so that no one could walk away paying a few dollars for littering.

Though the legislators saw fit not to tamper with the monetary fines, they did add community service time, not less than 25 hours and no more than 250 hours, as an alternate or addition to the monetary fine for the first violation.

The ball was now in Compretta's court.

The students traveled to the state capital in late January to personally lobby for their proposed amendments to the law. Mississippi Power Company provided the classes with a $2,198.80 grant to help them pursue their class project.

Upon the students' return from Jackson, the bill went to the Senate environmental protection committee where it was denied any addition to the law. The only change the Senate committee allowed was renewal.

The Marine Litter Act was written with a termination date of one year, "as a test," explained Frankiewicz.

Handshoe reported the students were disappointed, but not giving up.

WWII unit to reunite

The 904th Artillery Battalion of the famed 79th Infantry Division of WWII will conduct its 44th annual reunion in Canton, Ohio, July 4, 5, 6, and 7.

The battalion, after participating in the Normandy Invasion, was distinguished for conquering the Cherbourg Peninsula in addition to battle campaigns in Northern France, Rhineland, Central Europe and

They wrote more letters than before. They contacted sixth grade classes in schools throughout the state asking their help in writing to their representatives.

By February the bill left the Senate floor with the addition of minimum fines and community service hours, via Frankiewicz support, and handed over to the House of Representatives to review.

The ball was now in Compretta's court.

In February the bill went into a House committee, where the minimum fines and community service hours, added on the Senate floor, were stripped away. The House passed it in its original form, minus the termination date.

Finally the bill went before the joint legislation for vote in March and a stalemate was reached. The House said "Yes, as it is," while the Senate said "No, put back the amendments."

A conference committee of three members from the House and three members from the Senate was formed. Fortunately among these six, both of "the kids' champions were present, with Compretta on the House side and Frankiewicz on the Senate side.

How could anyone doubt that victory was near?

"I thought it wouldn't pass when part of it died. But when we got the news that it passed,"

Ardennes-Alsace.

The 79th Division was known as the Lorraine Cross Division and was awarded France's Unit Citation of the Croix DeGuerre for its assistance in combat to that country.

Duke Levy, now a resident of Diamondhead, who served with the battalion from its activation in June 1942 and throughout combat, is interested in getting this reunion notice to all former members of the 904th Battalion who reside in Mississippi and neighboring states. He may be contacted at (601) 255-2715.

I dreamed of cheesecakes all through the other night, cheesecakes of all flavors and kinds, and even found myself counting, not sheep, but cheesecakes, even as I lay awake later in the night!

Small wonder that I did, as I had fallen asleep all but "drooling" over "more than 100 sumptuous versions of the ultimate dessert," as the subtitle on the cover of my latest cookbook acquisition states! The book is "Cheesecake Extraordinaire" by Mary Crowner (Taylor Publishing Company, hard cover, $24.50).

From simply elegant to superbly sophisticated in fillings, there's a cheesecake for almost every taste, even "guilt-free" cheesecakes for the calorie-and-cholesterol-conscious! The book is also a treat for the eyes, with its luscious color photos—if photos can be called luscious, at least to the eyes! Let's settle for "luscious-looking" cakes!

Whether you're an experienced cook or a novice, you'll not find it too difficult to turn out culinary masterpieces with the aid of the author's easy directions and helpful hints on avoiding the usual pitfalls of cheesecake preparation. I refer to the cheesecake's tendency to cracking and falling and other such disasters, which befall most of us from time to time. I've had my share, I must confess!

As the author reminds us, the major problems of cheesecake baking are, of course, the above-mentioned falling and cracking. To reduce the chances of cracking, she advises simple precautions to avoid the three bugbears: overbeating, baking at too high temperatures and overbaking.

To help avoid cracking, Crowner says, be careful not to overbeat the batter when adding the eggs, but always use the lowest speed of the electric mixer, and don't beat them too long! Check the accuracy of your oven with an oven thermometer lest you bake the cheesecake at too high a temperature; and don't overbake—this can cause the "Grand Canyon" of cracks!

Cracking may also occur in the cooling process, she cautions. The cake shrinks as it cools; and if the filling sticks to the side of the pan, the cake will crack in the center. So, the author advises, run the edge of a knife around the inside edge of the cake to separate the cheesecake from the pan when you remove it from the oven.

And, what "if—"OOPS—it cracked" you want to know. Repair is easy. After the cheesecake cools, smooth away cracks and flaws with a hot, wet sharp knife. (Dip the knife into hot water quickly, and make your repairs; unless it's chocolate—in that case, use a hot, dry knife, as water can discolor chocolate. (After dipping the knife in hot water, quickly dry it off, and repair your chocolate cheesecake.)

For best results, let your cake cool at room temperature, then refrigerate it overnight uncovered, before adding the topping or garnishes, as uncovered storage prevents moisture from forming on the surface. Oh, I almost forgot to remind you: place your springform pan (that's the sort to use, of course) on a non-shiny baking sheet before baking to avoid leaking of the filling.)

As for what's in these delectable cheesecakes, the choice is up to you. There are recipes for chocolate cheesecakes, strawberry cheesecakes, even a Peanut Butter and Jelly Cheesecake! There's a Praline Cheesecake recipe, and there are spirited cheesecakes, Amaretto Cheesecake, Daquiri Cheesecake and Pina Colada Cheesecake, to mention just a few.

There's an Irish Cream Chocolate Cheesecake—that's the recipe I chose to try, you might have known!

Here's the cheesecake of cheesecakes, made with Irish Cream liqueur and chocolate: CHOCOLATE IRISH CREAM CHEESECAKE

Chocolate Cookie Crust:
11 milk chocolate sandwich cream cookies, crushed

3 Tblsp. butter or margarine, melted

In a small bowl, stir together crushed cookies and melted butter or margarine till well combined. Press crumb mixture evenly on the bottom of a greased 9-inch springform pan. Chocolate Irish Cream Filling:

18 oz. cream cheese
2/3 cup sugar
5 eggs
2/3 cup whipping cream
3/4 cup Irish Cream liqueur
1 1/4 tsp. vanilla extract
2 tsp. hot water
1 1/4 tsp. instant coffee
1 pkg. (12-oz.) milk chocolate chips, melted

Sifted powdered sugar

In a large bowl, combine cream cheese and sugar. Beat with electric mixer till smooth. Add eggs one at a time, beating well after each addition. Beat in liqueur and vanilla extract. Stir together hot water and instant coffee. Stir into creamcheese mixture. Stir in melted chocolate. Pour cream cheese mixture over crust.

Bake at 350 degrees for 15 minutes. Lower temperature to 200 degrees and bake for 1 hour and 10 minutes or till the center no longer looks wet or shiny. Remove the cake from the oven and run a knife around the inside of the pan. Turn oven off, return cake to oven for additional 2 hours. Chill uncovered overnight.

Place a decorative stencil over top of cheesecake, sift powdered sugar over stencil. Carefully remove stencil. Chill until serving time. (12 to 18 slices) Enjoy!

Ruth Beebe Hill: a timeless spirit

BY JACQUI COCHRAN

Author Ruth Beebe Hill was in the middle of editing a novel in her Diamond-head home when she took time out for interview number 7,001.

Though Hill lives on San Juan Island off the Pacific coast of Washington, she spends three or four months out of the year on the Gulf Coast where she and her late husband Dr. Borroughs Reid Hill had often visited during his early days of cancer research at the Ochsner Clinic in New Orleans.

She is a woman of many hats and of many times. Last Friday, she was editing a futuristic novel, speaking with a man in Canada about the 1936 Los Angeles home of director Josef Von Sternberg, and now recalling the 25 years of work and study involved in the completion of her critically acclaimed novel Hanta Yo.

Describing her life, she calls herself writer, journalist, lecturer, professor and editor. But she is much more than that.

She is one of those rare people who has actively chosen her path and continues to do so.

"When I was married I told my husband I want a boy and a book, in that order," she reminisced.

ily decisions. Each of us had a voice."

Though her son is now a man in his 40's and patriarch of his own home, Reid and Hill continue to travel together on her annual treks into the wilds.

She began work on her Hanta Yo following Reid's fifth birthday.

"I spent the first five years reading over 5,000 books, stories and pamphlets on the Western Indian," she said, searching for an understanding of the "prime time," as she calls the period of Indian history prior to outside contact.

"I wanted to write of the people who lived on this continent before any others."

"I asked myself 'What did each writer discover about the Indian?'"

"I kept looking for the common denominator."

"What I did discover was that the Indian and the white man were at a total juxtaposition."

"I knew then, my knowledge to this point would not serve me in writing a book."

The story of Hanta Yo began years before, according to Hill.

"It was on Thanksgiving Day, when I was nine years old. My dad said, 'Ruth, are you aware that it was an Indian who greeted your ancestors?' Of course I was busy looking at the turkey thinking, I hope I get both legs."

She said the Allegheny Reservation in upstate Ohio was near to where they resided, so it was there she first met with the people the world would later come to know as 'Native Americans'.

"I remember that experience. It was a misty day. There were no paved roads and the houses were not like others I had seen. 'We were told the people were on their way to a council meeting. 'I saw all these people, walking down the road and I thought, 'I want to be like them. Tall walking, proud walking, free walking.'"

"My father saw the chickens and the poverty."

"I saw the people. 'I won the posture contest that fall at school; even as a little girl, the experience carried over into my life.'"

Following the first five years of research, Hill took her studies 'to the field,' reinforcing her love of the outdoors.

She related how, after a time, the animals took on a new perspective to her eyes. "They were to me as they were to an Indian."

"I said, 'Now, I am ready.'"

"It was time for me to move on to actual contact."

Her field studies took her to Browning, Montana where she met with members of the Blackfoot.

Hill told of how difficult it was at that time for a white woman to be allowed into the inner circle of the Indian tribe.

"The Indian was no part of the national consciousness at this time."

"They looked at you like, 'Here's another one of those writers who wants to know about us. Who will tell the stories this time?'"

It was at opening of the Indian village at Disneyland, that Hill met the people who would introduce her to Two Bears, a Yanktonais Sioux.

"He was one of the most important people in my life."

"It was through him I met the old full-blood grandfathers and grandmothers who shared with me their hearts."

"They were so wonderful."

One of the most intriguing aspects of Hanta Yo is the phrasing of the character's speech.

Hill, with the assistance of Chunksa Yuha, a full-blooded Santee Sioux, translated the novel into the now archaic Lakotah/Lakotah dialect and then re-translated into English based on Webster's 1806 edition.

Lyle Royer and Hill work on new novel

Hill married in 1940. The boy, Reid, was born three years after their marriage, in accord with a time schedule chosen by Hill. She devoted the first five years of their son's life to his care.

"Maybe that is why we are so close today," added Hill. "We were a family of three. Each of us had an equal vote in family decisions. Each of us had a voice."

Though her son is now a man in his 40's and patriarch of his own home, Reid and Hill continue to travel together on her annual treks into the wilds.

Waveland second graders meet Desert Storm pen pal

BY T. H. (DOC) TOUPS

The second graders in Theresa Peterson's class at Waveland Elementary School received a first-person account of Operation Desert Storm adventures last Thursday, when their Marine Corps pen pal paid them a visit.

Lance Corporal Anthony Mallini of Pass Christian has recently returned from the Persian Gulf and brings with him a wealth of stories and photographs.

Students listened with rapt attention as he told of coming under enemy shell and rocket fire as Iraqi projectiles aimed at other targets mistakenly fell on his unit's position.

Corporal Mallini, of Alpha Company, 1st Battalion, 3rd Marines, explained that his outfit is based in Kaneohe, Hawaii. They were sent overseas on September 3, 1990 and did not return until March 19, 1991.

Though his military position is that of 80mm mortar radio operator, Mallini said that when the ground war broke out, he'd pulled mess duty and was battling encrusted pots and pans, rather than hostile Iraqis. This soon changed as he was sent to his unit's forward positions.

The corporal shared his photos with the class and fielded a question and answer session. He and members of his platoon had maintained correspondence with the class throughout the conflict and the students were obviously thrilled to meet "their" Marine.

Several of the young ladies in the class repeatedly questioned the 20-year-old Marine as to his marital status and seemed crest-fallen to discover that he is happily engaged. He is scheduled to return to his unit in Hawaii soon.

Hill

Attempting to faithfully reflect the Indian idiom, a substance—a thought pattern, which is different from other written English emerges, bringing life to each page and character.

"Remember the third manuscript draft," said Hill of the book, "I looked up from the typewriter and I saw them; Ahleza the mystic one, Tonweya the scout and friend, Wanagi the seer—the people from Hanta Yo. There they were. I called, 'Wait for me. I wanted to go with them.'"

"They called out, 'tell the world, tell the world about us,'" Hill still tells the world of the American Indian. She lectures and teaches classes on the Pacific West Coast Indian, she professionally edits and reviews manuscripts, at her discretion for all the major publishing companies throughout the United States.

Hill becomes enthusiastic about any good novel. Into that world and time period, like the Indian, in the imaginative, she "becomes that."

Hill's life has brought her into contact with many other renowned writers. She maintains cherished friendships with the famous and not so famous.

Hill was working with a young radiologist from Los Angeles the day of this interview, on his yet unpublished novel "Maiden Voyage."

Lyle Royer explained, his novel will be a combination of physics and religion, a twist on what he calls, "a puritanical aspect of creation."

A young female astronaut goes into space for three months, has no contact with any sort of life form and returns to Earth pregnant.

"Doesn't it sound wonderful," Hill exclaimed.

Her enthusiasm for Royer's book was no less than if it had been her own.

Hanta Yo was the alternate for the Pulitzer Prize in Literature for 1979. James Michener presented her the Western Heritage Award in Literature for 1979 in Oklahoma.

In June she will travel to New York City to spend three days with the American Achievement Academy.

The American Achievement Academy was founded in 1961 as a means to bring together the best with the future best. Forty top representatives in every field of endeavor are gathered with 400 of the top high school students throughout the country for three days of exchange.

"It is the most stimulating three days you can imagine," said Hill. "No one even goes to bed, for fear of missing something."

Tonight, Hill will meet the public during a reception in her honor at Bookends Bookstore on Highway 90 near the Bay Bridge.

Owner Susan Daigre is offering refreshments to all visitors from 6:30 to 8 p.m., along with the opportunity to purchase first edition copies of Hanta Yo.

SUCCESS EXPRESS

Parents, is your copy of Dr. Spock dog-eared? Are you having difficulty in weeding through all the "expert opinions" found in books and magazines?

Dr. Darla Miller, EDD, child hood development specialist and author of Positive Child Guidance, joins Mississippi's First Lady Julie Mabius for a discussion of the role of positive child guidance in preparing young children to become competent, confident and cooperative citizens on the premiere of "Success Express" at 8 p.m. Thursday, April 11, on Mississippi ETV.

Area life comes to art

Hancock County High School art students work at finishing a wall mural in the school cafeteria. The mural represents the region of influences within Hancock County. Wyatt Waters from Clinton was commissioned by the school through a state grant to assist the students with the design and process. Art teacher Billie Shook said, "The purpose was to provide the students with an art project, and through the research on Hancock County, instill pride in their heritage." Clockwise from top, junior Richard Liles paints a representation of the NASA Space Shuttle; Waters paints a seagull while other students add flags to a sailboat and work on the Bay bridge; and students work on the individual pieces of the whole.
